PROJECT AIMS

- ◆ Produce a pilot training course on how young people can manage their money and be aware of the various opportunities and threats throughout their lives in relation to money and develop curricula with supporting videos and documents
- ◆ Produce a series of worksheets which will allow students to work remotely and separately to the instructional video and a student information booklet

BACKGROUND

Personal finance programme is a modular curriculum aimed at students aged 14 - 21. The project will produce and pilot a training course on how young people can manage their money and be aware of the various opportunities and threats throughout their lives in relation to money.

We will do this by conducting research in each country to establish what information already exists, whom it is aimed at, and what levels of access and awareness there are in relation to the topic. Along with this we will conduct primary research to accurately establish the specific needs of the target group.

We will then develop a training programme (curricula) which is modular format to teach students how to manage their money.

The training course will be supported by a series of 10 instructional videos which will allow the course to be accessed remotely as an e-learning option.

Additionally we will produce a series of worksheets which will make up a workbook, which will allow students to work remotely and complementary to the training course and the instructional videos
